Student Media Center runs campaign for Week of Love

Alexander Sletten

Contributing Writer

During the week of February 8th through the 12th the Student Media Center is having an event called The Week of Love Giveaway. This year they are involving students of Comm 2400, Social Media Tools and Strategies, to help plan and spread the word about the event.

The Week of Love Giveaway is spread throughout the entire college and will be broadcast and used entirely through social media sites such as Instagram, Twitter, and Facebook.

"This is the first year working with the class on a media campaign. We are hoping that by using the class it will reach even more students across SLCC and more students will be exposed to it and have a chance to win," said Alison Arndt-Wild, program manager for the Student Media Center.

Students in the Comm 2400 class have some varying views on the event taking place.

"I'm excited to figure out how social media is used to advertise," said Lindsey Johnson.

Some students held more ambivalent views on this romantic holiday.

"To be perfectly honest, I think that it is pretty pathetic that the world has to set apart a day for people to show love for their loved ones," said Scott Funk. "That should be everyday. But since I am getting a grade for this class I guess that I'm kind of excited."

Throughout the week, pairs of people in the class will be putting up and advertising a particular topic for each day of the week. Some of the themes for the days of the week are: Worst Valentines Date ever, Take a Pic with a Friend, and Singles Awareness Day.

Pay attention as the week goes on to see what the theme is for that day so you can make a post and be entered to win one of the many prizes that the Student Media Center will be giving out.

Every post, tweet, and picture should have the hashtag #ShareTheLoveSLCC. The Facebook site is facebook.com/slccsmc, Twitter is @slccsmc, and Instagram is @slccsmc.

New Year calls for updated website with new look and features

Aleem Pathammavong

Contributing Writer

A new year calls for a new website for Salt Lake Community College! SLCC has recently updated their website to an easy-to-use and more informational site.

The website's homepage has a bunch of new tabs that students may find helpful such as My SLCC, Academics, Community and the Current Students tab.

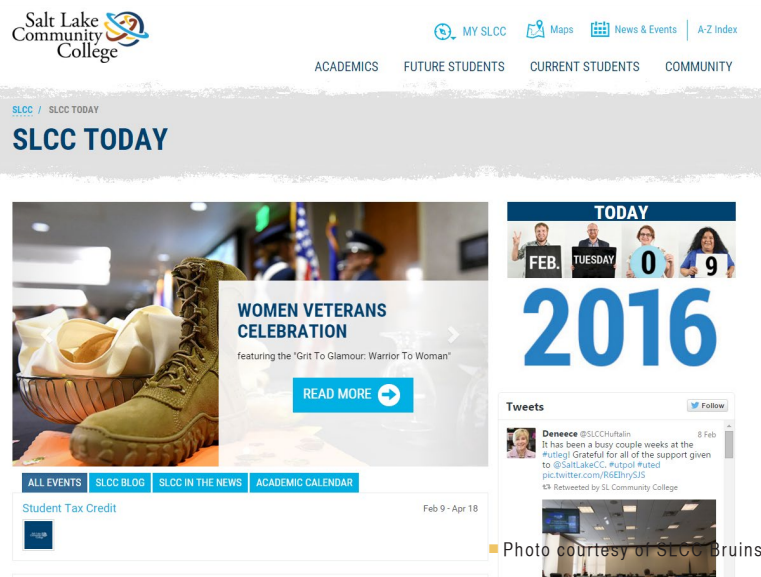

The Current Students tab offers many tools to help students. When you click on the Current Student tab, it brings up different links anywhere from giving students guidance to everyday student needs such as Advising, Class Schedule, Tuition & Fees.

The website offers future students guidance to applying to SLCC. It also shows all the different degrees and classes they might be interested in.

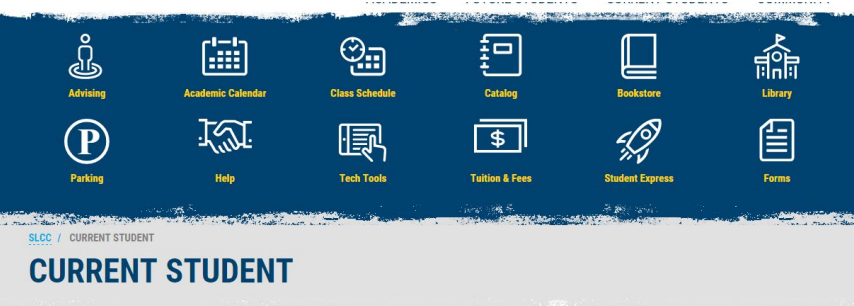

SLCC's website loves feedback, so if you have any suggestions, concerns, or are having trouble finding what you're looking for, the bottom right corner of the screen allows students to give feedback.

If you have any questions about SLCC, their website can answer it for you. If they can't, the website has many student support numbers that you can call that will help you.

For those of you who have not had the chance to check out SLCC's new website, jump online and visit the new and improved SLCC.edu website and join in all the fun!

The SLCC website has a new updated look fresh for the 2016 year.

The website has new tabs that students may find helpful for information.

Eric Gray a 19-year-old freshman at SLCC was asked if he found SLCC's website useful and easy to use. His response was "Yes, I really like that they have the different specific tabs to guide me around the website. Also the website answers almost every question I have about the school. It's great!"

The website also helps students interact more with the school by offering the Community tab and showing all the different activities SLCC does on and off campus. SLCC cares about their students and want them to have the college experience they dream about.

New promising additions to lady Bruin's volleyball team

Joseph Smith

Contributing Writer

It's time for Bruins Volleyball once again and the team is shaping up to be very competitive this year.

The new additions to the team are not only very promising. The team might possibly take us all the way to Nationals.

"The team is looking great, I think [we] will go far this year," said team trainer, Indigo Allen.

Among the new additions to the Bruins Volleyball team are two new promising players, Thayna Margana Fuchs (Ty) and her twin sister Thamyres Alexia Fuchs (Tem).

The sisters are not only new to the Bruins team, they're new to the United States as well.

Born and raised in Brazil, the sisters began playing volleyball at a very young age.

According to the sisters, volleyball was not as arduous and competitive in Brazil as it is here at Salt Lake Community College.

For them the work is hard, and the exercises are different from when they played in Brazil.

Although Ty and Tem are very excited to be here and take advantage of all the opportunities SLCC offers, there are difficulties, especially when learning a new language.

The twins expressed some concern over not being able to communicate effectively, along with some of adjustments to the new culture, particularly when expressing themselves when faced with the obstacle of a language barrier.

The Twins have a very lengthy schedule outside of the volleyball court as well.

Bruin volleyball team found volunteering at Utah Food bank while spending time off the court.

They study English from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. Monday through Thursday. After English, they hit the volleyball court at 5:30 p.m for practice.

Aside from the long hours of study and the difficult workout regimen, Ty and Tem are very excited to be here, and look forward to having a great year with the Bruins.

Movie producer, Adam Leipzig, holds informal Q&A for film students

Lindsay Johnson
Contributing Writer

On Wednesday January 27th, movie producer Adam Leipzig held an informal question and answer session here at Salt Lake Community College.

Adam answered many questions for the film students at SLCC to help them gain essential knowledge for producing films.

Adam first started working in the film industry as an employee of Disney.

As he moved up the corporate ladder, he eventually chose to leave the high-powered positions behind so that he could remain on the sets of movies and do what he loves most.

One student asked, "What is your favorite movie that you have produced so far?"

"It's always the next one," replied Leipzig.

The film students here at SLCC were lucky enough to get to see the first ever preview for Leipzig's newest film, "A Plastic Ocean".

This documentary is about the dangers of plastic and other garbage that is filling our oceans, and what we can do as individuals to save them.

Leading into the preview of the trailer, Leipzig commented that, "The best reaction to a movie is an emotional reaction."

As well as running a successful movie producing company, Leipzig has also found the time to start a non-profit organization called Creative Future.

This foundation is the public voice for creative rights and helps artists protect their artistic creations from things like copyrights and piracy.

During the Q & A, one of the questions asked was, "What is the best advice you can give to an aspiring film producer?"

To that Leipzig responded, "Don't try to do what everyone else is doing, do what is unique and special to you."

Hollywood is currently facing accusations that there is not enough diversity seen in movies and productions. When asked his opinion on the matter Leipzig simply replied, "Hollywood is very male and very white. It's sad but true." When writing a movie, producers are not thinking about what these characters need to look like, but more along the lines of what these characters do (interest, hobbies, jobs, careers, etc.).

Adam Leipzig is a very accomplished and busy man. By taking the time to come and talk to the film students here, he showed them what going after their dreams can look like. He ended his Q & A session with the simple advice, "Don't devalue you own work. All creative work has value."

Classes offer better understanding of finance and credit

Fernando Pasillas

Contributing Writer

The perfect credit score is something that many desire. Having good credit is supposed to mean you have proven how responsible of a consumer you are, but understanding finances and how your credit works can also be very confusing.

SLCC offers several courses to help students better understand the world of finance and credit.

Salt Lake Community College is there to help by offering multiple courses that allows students the ability to better understand how it all works.

Professor of Finance, Dennis Wilson states that in developing a good credit score or profile, the rule of the 5-C's are golden. "It can direct an individual to make wise choices and enjoy the fruits of good money management which includes a good credit score," Wilson said.

According to Wilson, the 5-C's of credit include:

SLCC offers several courses to help students better understand the world of finance and credit.

1. Character: fulfilling promises starts with always doing what you say you'll do.

2. Capacity: this is a measure of your available cash-flow to meet monthly obligations. Fixed obligations should be less than 20 percent of your gross monthly income.

3. Capital: your reserves or savings for emergency plus additional net worth after your total debt.

4. Collateral: when borrowing, lenders typically offer better rates and terms if you finance tangible assets with market value and pledge these assets in the event you are unable to repay the loan.

5. Conditions: economic conditions play a large part in the availability of credit. In a recession, lenders are very cautious and credit extension is limited. It is just the opposite if the economy is expanding.

For students who want to explore credit and finance, whether it be for personal or professional reasons, Professor Wilson, as well as other professors, offer Personal Finance 1050 classes.

The classes are available at the Jordan, Taylorsville, and South City Campus as well as the option to take the class online.

Students support veterans with thoughtful Valentine notes

Jayel Kirby

Contributing Writer

While brainstorming for the perfect way to romance your sweetheart on Valentine's Day, take a moment to write a quick note of support for one of our soldiers. One who might be far away from their sweetheart this year, or who has served overseas in the past.

SLCC's Veterans Services Office at the Redwood Campus in Taylorsville is accepting valentines now through February 14 as part of their 9th Annual Valentines 4 Vets drive.

A table will also be set up in the events hallway at the student center on February 11 and 12. Alternatively, valentines and donations can be delivered to Enrollment Services at the Jordan and South City campuses by February 12 at noon. Participating in the drive is easy.

"You don't have to write a novel," said Veteran's Services Specialist, Alicia Pia. "You can write something as simple as 'Happy V-Day'. It works. They pretty much appreciate anything they can get."

Veterans Services Manager, Darlene Head, encourages students and staff alike to participate.

"Come and write a message of love or support for our military members and veterans. Let them know you appreciate their service to the country and to the world," said Head.

Valentines can be made at home and brought to the office or you can add a personal note to the pre-made patriotic valentines that are available at the locations mentioned above.

Donations of a dollar or more are appreciated to help cover expenses for packaging, postage, and purchasing candy.

Soldiers of all kinds will receive the valentines. Deliveries are made to four Veteran's Administration hospitals in Utah (Salt Lake City, Ogden, Payson, and Ivins), three Veteran Transitional Housing Centers (Valor House and Freedom Landing in SLC, and Saint Anne's in Ogden), and to units serving overseas.

All valentines will be read to determine which venue is most appropriate for the given message. A message wishing a veteran to "get well" might be sent to a VA hospital, whereas one saying "we're praying for you" would most likely be sent to a soldier overseas.

If you have a special soldier or veteran you'd like to receive valentines, you can request to have a box of 250 valentines, stuffed with candy, sent to any military member or veteran that is serving in the states, deployed overseas, or an honored veteran at home.

Soldiers who receive the boxes are encouraged to share the contents with their fellow service members.

By participating in this drive, you will be helping to carry out a long standing tradition that was started by Ms. Head.

When she was just a child, she began writing messages to give to veterans returning from Vietnam. During Desert Storm, she and her three children began sending valentines to soldiers serving overseas.

Over 32,000 valentines/letters of support have been collected for veterans and active duty military members since 2008.

Ms. Head, a Korean War veteran's daughter, feels that while appreciating those who sacrifice in combat is vital, we should remember that they provide service beyond that realm.

"A lot of people don't talk about how our service members provide humanitarian service all over the world," said Head.

The Veterans Services Office at the Redwood Campus in Taylorsville is open from 8:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. Take a moment to drop by with a valentine message of your own by February 14th.

"It's painless," said Miss Pia, "Unless you get a paper cut."

Making Career Decisions

Many colleges and universities prefer that you have a major in mind when you transfer because it will be evidence that you have a real sense of purpose or direction. Choosing a major early in college can even help you be a “step ahead.” You can often get a great start by taking the pre-requisite courses for your program at Salt Lake Community College.

Academic and Career Advising wants to assist you in making a good career decision – one based on your interests, values, skills, personality and accurate information about the current labor market. Please follow the next steps of the career planning process for your success.

Self-assessment & Discovery

Have you completed a thorough assessment of your interests? Do you know what your values are and how they impact your career choice? Do you know how your personality may influence your career decision? These and other factors play a role in determining your choice of a major and a career. Here are some great resources to help you discover more about your interests and abilities:

- * Take a personality and/or interest assessment through the Academic and Career Advising office-<http://www.slcc.edu/academicadvising/career-advising/assessments.aspx>.
- * Explore the Free Online “Major and Career Discovery Series” Course- <http://www.slcc.edu/academicadvising/career-advising/index.aspx>.
- * Make an appointment with an Academic and Career Advisor.
- * Enroll in a 1 credit class, “Major and Career Decision Making,” LE 1200.
- * Engage in the #100daysSLCC campaign and take 10 minutes a day for 100 days to discover your major and career path
 - o Blog: 100daysslcc.blogspot.com
 - o Twitter: @slccadvising
 - o Instagram: 100daysslcc
 - o Facebook: Salt Lake Community College

Investigate & Gather Information

Have you researched the occupations that interest you? Do you know the nature of the work, working conditions, training required, salary, and job outlook? Use the resources below for ideas about how and where to gather information:

- * Review the SLCC general catalog at: <http://www.slcc.edu/catalog>.
- * Gather information on possible careers and see which academic programs can prepare you for these careers.
- * Visit the Career Library at Taylorsville Redwood Campus STC 242 or South City Campus W138.
- * Visit various websites to find out information such as job duties, needed education, outlook, pay, etc. A few include: Type Focus-- accessed through your “MyPage,” Student Tab, Academic /Career Advising, then Type Focus New Users, <https://www.utahfutures.org> and www.bls.gov.
- * Enroll in an introductory class in a field you may be interested in. Please consult with an academic advisor about your options.

Narrowing Choices

Have you narrowed down your potential occupational choices to a few? Determining your career choices, although seemingly difficult at first, becomes easier as you gather more information and assess your likes and dislikes. Some strategies to narrow your choices are:

- * Create a “pro and con” list for each occupation, or compare them against different factors.
- * Visit with SLCC department coordinators and faculty to learn more about major and career opportunities. * Visit Student Employment and Cooperative Education. See www.slcc.edu/seces
- * Obtain a snapshot of the current outlook in a field by going to various websites to check out how many positions exist at present in this field. Some include: <https://slcc.emsicareercoach.com/> ; <https://jobs.utah.gov>.
- * Perform an informational interview, where you ask questions from experts in that field.
- * Apply for internships or summer jobs.
- * Get involved in volunteer work by contacting the Thayne Center for Service and Learning, www.slcc.edu/thaynecenter, or contact employers directly.
- * Ask close friends or family members to review your career exploration results and discuss them with you.

Evaluate

It is important to choose a major and a career that will be satisfying for you over time. If you are still unsure of your preferences, don’t get discouraged. Career planning takes time and effort! Your options at this point at SLCC may be:

- * Choose an area of study that you love! You will enjoy your classes and your college experience more fully.
- * Continue your career advising sessions.
- * Enroll in a class that covers career exploration.
- * Choose introductory major courses to explore different majors.
- * Talk to an Academic and Career Advisor about obstacles that may be delaying your decision. Please go to www.slcc.edu/academicadvising for more information.
