County Library Services offer whole world of resources

Scott Funk

Staff Writer @ScottFunk0

Salt Lake County West Jordan Library

Throughout a student's educational experience, extra help is always an added bonus. At Salt Lake Community College there are several tutor labs, and counselors available for help. There is also help outside of SLCC. Accessing this help is as simple as having a library card.

Libraries are a great source of information, and The Salt Lake County Library Services have hundreds of databases available for students to access for help with their education. These resources are free with a Salt Lake County library card.

To obtain a library card, students can begin the process online at catalog.slcolibrary.org/polaris/custom/slco/content/agreeTerms.aspx. They can also stop by one of the nearest County Library locations. Library locations can be found at slcolibrary.org/glgal/directory.htm.

All that is needed to obtain a County Library card is an ID and proof of address.

After a student has obtained a library card, they can access any of the resources offered to them.

"There are databases that help with getting money and financial assistance for college, test preparation for getting into college, figuring out what career you should go into, live homework help, live resume help, online tutorials and research tools," says Liz Sollis, Marketing and Communications Manager for the Salt Lake County Library Services.

Sollis provided a partial list of the resources available to students:

- County Library's Tuition Funding Sources - for students seeking assistance with funding for college
- Learning Express Library - for students seeking help with test preparation
- UtahFutures.com - for students who want help selecting a career that works best for them
- Brainfuse - provides LIVE homework help for students of all ages. Live tutoring by PhD and Master level experts in a variety of subjects every day from 2 p.m.-11 p.m.
- Mango - learn a variety of languages online as well as on an app
- Lynda.com - hundreds of online courses and thousands of tutorial videos to help beginners and experts increase business, creative and technology skills
- Freegal - free music downloads
- Librarian by appointment - provides one-on-one personalized assistance in 30-minute blocks.

There are also a variety of free online databases for students conducting research:

- Points of View Reference Center - dig into both sides of issues from citizen rights to evolution and taxes
- World Book - online encyclopedia
- Academic Magazine Search - find the latest research in your topic
- Biography Resource Center - learn about current people and historical figures
- Gale Virtual Reference Library - full text books from business, literature, multicultural studies and medicine

"The County Library has hundreds of databases," says Sollis. "From medical to nutrition to arts and entertainment - and all that is needed to access them is a County Library card."

Along with being able to access all of the available databases with a County Library card, students can also check items out online and at one of the branches, as well as use the technologies offered including: free

Wi-Fi, computers, 3-D printing and, for a small fee, printing, scanning and copying.

"The County Library is a cool community hub where students of all ages and abilities can read, create, learn, play and connect," says Sollis. "If students have a County Library Card and have not been using it because of unpaid fines, we invite them to stop by one of our branches or call Customer Services and we will do our best to get them back on the library track again."

By simply acquiring a County Library card, a student can elevate their college experience.

There are several ways to obtain information about resources the County Library has to offer. A student can visit the website at slcolibrary.org; stop by one of the 18 branches; or call Customer Service at 801.943.4636.

They can also follow the County Library Facebook, Twitter, Instagram, Pinterest, Goodreads and Youtube.

XBOX WEDNESDAYS: A BREAK FROM BOREDOM

Taylor Miller

Contributing Writer

If you're stuck at South City Wednesdays at lunchtime, why not frag some noobs? Xbox Wednesdays are back at SLCC, providing students who have a break on Wednesdays between 11:00 a.m. and 1:00 p.m. with a way to kill some time and connect with other students all while playing their favorite video games.

"People just kept coming back for more and more," says Anthony Bible, the North Region Daytime Chair of Student Life and Leadership.

After its initial success last year, there was little resistance to a second year of Xbox Wednesdays. The goal is to create a space where students can blow off some steam between classes, but more importantly, connect with other students.

"What we wanted to do was create a time and an event where students could come meet new people and engage with one another," says Bible.

Students of all ages and backgrounds can find common ground in virtual battlefields, and even faculty members can be found participating between classes.

There are currently only a few games available, but students will have the opportunity to help decide which games will be added to the growing collection. Student Life and Leadership (SL&L) will be speaking with participants of Xbox Wednesdays to get an idea of which games should be added.

SL&L's purpose is to create leadership environments and provide students with hands on experience in having a voice, getting involved, finding their place, and shaping moments of inspiration. According to the students who have experienced it so far, Xbox Wednesdays has done exactly that.

"The best part is meeting new people from different backgrounds and just having everyone come have a good time," says Bible.

Xbox Wednesdays will run through the end of the school year. If the early reaction from the student body is any indication, there is a good chance students will see it again next year.

Stop by the SL&L Office in room 2-070 at the South City Campus to participate every week.

STUDENTS, FACULTY, HOLD COURT WITH BASKETBALL PICK-UP

Stephanie Hernandez

Contributing Writer

Basketball pickup games are now available in the Lifetime Activity Center building at the Taylorsville Redwood campus every Friday from 5:00 p.m. - 7:00 p.m.

This activity originated earlier this year when the Staff Association was looking to coordinate an activity where students and staff are able to participate. The approach to find out which activity to include was done through a series of surveys.

The first round of surveys given to students and faculty asked what type of activity would be preferred, and where. Once the first round of surveys were received with sports being favored, a second survey went out to determine which sport staff and faculty would prefer. They received 150 basketball responses making basketball the winner.

Basketball pickup games have been a very successful method for students and faculty to get to know each other. Students get to build that trust with faculty and feel comfortable to express their achievements and goals. Julia Ellis, president of the Staff Association, believes playing a game is a perfect way to interact and socially mentor students. In addition to bringing students and faculty together, it allows students to meet and create relationships with one another.

For those interested in participating in the basketball pickup games, you can visit the LAC building at Taylorsville Redwood campus any time between 5:00 p.m and 7:00 p.m. There are no fees, uniforms or commitment.

Alternative Fall Break is a chance to give back

Ryan Vuyk

Staff Writer @RyanVuyk23

Fall break starts on the Oct. 13 and goes through the weekend. It's a time for students to catch up on school work and mentally prep themselves for the rest of the semester.

With the Holiday seasons approaching there are many opportunities to help others. SLCC students are provided an opportunity to help others over fall break with a service opportunity called "Alternative Fall Break."

"Alternative Breaks are intended to be immersive service experiences, engaging students in service work addressing social issues such as food security, homelessness, animal rights, and other important topics," says Alternate Fall Break participant, Brandon Devlin. "We hope that as a result of the training... all students are able explore what the root causes of these important issues are and see how they can engage with their communities to creating sustainable positive change."

Over the break, the group will be helping out at many different locations. On Oct. 13, they will be at the Real Food Rising garden. The following afternoon, they will help out Wasatch Community Gardens Green Team Garden. They will be at the Saint Vincent De Paul Dining Hall on Saturday to finish out the projects the weekend has to offer.

"Alternative Fall Break participants learn what it means to be an active citizen, and how individual actions make a difference on a large scale," says Devlin. "This is also an opportunity to challenge our own perceptions, both of ourselves and of others. By expanding our comfort zones on these projects, students also practice leadership skills like handling controversy with civility, collaboration, increasing self-knowledge, and critical thinking."

Serving others and helping the community is a great way for people to use their time. To register and begin helping others, contact the Thayne Center for Service and Learning, located at the South City campus or visit slcc.edu/thaynecenter/.
