Campus protection provides peace of mind

The Parking Lot Escort Service is a new service added to Salt Lake Community College campuses this summer. This allows students, faculty and patrons on any campus to call 801-957-3800 to request an escort to their car by the nearest Campus Safety Officer or Utah Highway patrol, should they feel threatened or endangered. The service is available Monday - Friday from 6:00 p.m. - 10:00 p.m.

According to Lieutenant Section Commander for SLCC, Jeff Willmore, while crimes are rare, the program was started to make campuses safer for staff, students and visitors.

Lieutenant Willmore said that it's a preventative measure. The officer escort will carry a radio so that they can immediately call dispatch should an incident arise.

Willmore's advice if you have late classes is pretty straightforward and helpful.

"If you have to walk out to your vehicle at night, walk with someone, call someone that you can talk to while you walk, and to have the escort service number on speed dial so you can call them," says Willmore. "Keep an eye on your surroundings and park in well lighted areas so you don't have to walk far. Lock your car, keep any valuables in your trunk or put them out of sight."

How to make every day a Day of Service

Chandler Arnold and Sarah Hall

Contributing Writer

On September 8th, SLCC's Thayne Center hosted its first ever Day of Service. That day has passed, but there are still plenty of ways to serve the community while attending Salt Lake Community College.

Day of Service started off with a breakfast at the Student Event Center, along with a positive message from SLCC President, Deneece G. Huftalin, and the introduction of SLCC's Civic Action Plan, which allows its 3,000 employees 24 hours of paid leave for community service each year.

"We wanted to offer an incentive to our employees to allow them to provide hands-on voluntary service to their communities as part of an organized community service activity," says Huftalin.

The crowd of 160 students, staff, and faculty volunteers were treated to a breakfast where they were introduced to SLCC's plan to become more active in the community. Afterwards, they divided into groups to make an impact at several different project sites throughout the Salt Lake Valley.

Each site was determined based off the needs of 13 of Thayne Center's community partners including: Maliheh Free Clinic, Boys & Girls Clubs of Greater Projects varied from planting trees and pulling weeds, to giving food and support to several select populations of Salt Lake Valley.

After each project was completed, participants left with #SLCCServes t-shirts, knowing they made an impact on the community.

Since the end of Day of Service, the Thayne Center has not slowed down in community involvement. Within days after the big event, they were educating Utahns about disaster preparedness during the Be Ready Utah Conference and Expo. They are now getting ready to host another big event, the Utah Higher Education Food Summit, to combat food waste and hunger in SLCC and Salt Lake's community.

The Thayne Center's next service opportunity is the Alternative Fall Break, which runs October 19-21. To get involved at the Food Summit, or any future service activities offered through the Thayne Center, visit slcc.edu/thaynecenter or call 801-957-4555.

WATCHTOWER CAFÉ: A LOCAL HANGOUT SPOT FOR SLCC STUDENTS

Joe Fusare

Contributing Writer

(Far Left) The Watchtower offers coffee, juice, hand-made sodas, and Boba, all with a neat 10% student and 15% faculty discount. (Middle Top) The Cafe is located directly across from South City. Be safe and use the crosswalk! (Far Right) In addition to board games, the Watchtower boasts a classic table-style arcade cabinet. (Middle) The Watchtower isn't all fun and games though. Many students have made The Watchtower a favorite study spot. (Bottom) A host of boardgames are available for use, with Battleship being one of the most popular.

Celebrating their two-year anniversary Oct. 2, the Watchtower café and its owners Mike Tuiasoa and Cori Hooekstra offer Salt Lake Community College students beverages, benefits, games, art and more.

Tuiasoa and Hooekstra first opened up shop with the hope that people who love comics, art, coffee, and games would come and hangout. The Café has since offered events from nerd core to art shows. Local artists can also place their art in The Gallery of Rogues located inside of the shop during shows.

Tuiasoa says the Watchtower tries to “throw out and come up with the most unique, weirdest, original ideas for events that maybe no one else is doing because that’s our identity.”

Tuiasoa and Hooekstra run a Facebook page that lists the many events the Watchtower hosts. For the second Christmas in a row, the Watchtower will be hosting a Deadpool Santa who talks, cracks jokes, and takes pictures with kids. The event is called A Very Deadpool Christmas at Watchtower Café.

The Watchtower Café is a great place to form new relationships with people. Hooekstra mentions they offer multiple board games to play and this allows people to get to know each other in a low-pressure game. A café favorite is Battleship. Tuiasoa talks about how he has seen “so many friendships start here.”

To help students, the café offers students 10% discounts and faculty 15% discounts on every item.

Additionally, complementary Wi-Fi is provided with a purchase of a drink. Also located in the café is a study hall with private booths that are equipped with outlets for charging devices. If students need to do some late night studying the café is open until midnight. According to Hooekstra, the café has had many student film groups come in and film for projects because of the ample space offered throughout the café.

“We have seasonal positions,” says Hooekstra, and they are always accepting resumes.

However, Watchtower has certain requirements for people who would like to work there, making the hiring process a little more complicated. This is because the shop sells comic books and manga as well as selling food.

Tuiasoa and Hooekstra say they have “big ideas” planned for the Watchtower, so keep your eye out for this unique café and comic shop, located right across from South City Campus, at 1588 State Street.

Disability Awareness Week starts at SLCC

Aaron Martinez & Sam Boone

Contributing Writers

Salt Lake Community College is in the midst of Disability Awareness Week, which runs from September 18th to the 21st, with three main events at South City and Taylorsville Redwood campuses. This week comprises a series of events catered towards community disability awareness. The entire event is dedicated to the acknowledgement of our disabled students and to address issues regarding disability accommodations campus wide.

The series of events began on Monday with a student panel, "Life with a Disability," that took place in the Taylorsville Redwood Student Event Center. The panel was comprised of various students with disabilities of their own who spoke about difficulties they have faced in their lifetime. Donald Minor, a student with a disability, expresses his tribulations in promotional material for the event, saying "My disability will always be a piece of me, but if that is the only part of me you recognize, then you've only scratched the surface of who I am,"

The panel is going to be followed by the Assistive Technology Fair on Wednesday at the South City Campus Atrium.

"Assistive tech," says Jake Seamons, assistant director of the Disability Resource Center, "might be something like a program that will read the textbook to you."

The final event of the week is a presentation by Dr.

Amanda Kraus, the director of Disability Resources at the University of Arizona, on September 21st at the Taylorsville Redwood Student Event Center. The presentation will focus on issues such as microaggressions and stereotyping. Microaggressions are subtle acts of discrimination toward minority groups caused by misconceptions. These misconceptions hinder progressive growth of disability policies, as well as misconstrue the community views on the challenges disadvantaged youth and adults may be going through.

For those who want to show their support but can't make it to any of the events, Seamons recommends that, "If something in that fair is interesting to a student, they could definitely go to the establishment and meet the people who work there." That way, they will be able to get a feel for the messages that are being promoted to raise awareness of disabilities. The DRC is also making arrangements for Dr. Kraus' presentation to be streamed from the Taylorsville campus, so that everyone will have the opportunity to watch.

SLCC Athletics is looking for talent!

Submitted by Taylor Munroe

Salt Lake Community College Athletics Department is going to be hosting an open tryout for SLCC students and community members that are wanting to sing and/or play the national anthem at SLCC sporting events.

SLCC is home to seven nationally ranked teams; Volleyball, Men's Soccer, Women's Soccer, Men's Basketball, Women's Basketball, Baseball and Softball, and is in one of the most competitive athletic conferences in the nation!

In order to tryout, you must have a background in vocal and/or instrumental music. Tryouts will be on Friday, September 29th, 2017 in the Lifetime Activities Center Room 155 (Bruin Conference Room) on the Taylorsville

Redwood Campus from 1:00 PM to 4:00 PM.

Students and community members that have participated in the past had a blast singing and participating at SLCC sporting events, and it will look good on resumes.

For those that excel in the tryouts, we will forward your information to the Salt Lake City Stars, the NBA G-League affiliate team to the Utah Jazz.

If you are interested or have questions, please email Taylor Munroe at Taylor.Munroe@slcc.edu with your name, phone number, email address, resume, and a short biography.
