Study Abroad program a chance to expand one's world.

Can you say “La aventura te espera, ve a buscarla”? How about “Sahasi asa ahe, te sodha”? This simple yet profound statement encourages “adventure awaits, go find it.” SLCC is preparing such conquests for their 2018 study abroad programs.

The study abroad office is looking to renew their programs for India and Costa Rica next spring and summer. Open to all students of any major, studying abroad gives students an opportunity to travel internationally while earning college credit. Other benefits include learning a new culture, honing language skills, building career opportunities, as well as making lifelong friends.

“Global learning, which includes study abroad and co-curricular experiences, supports in understanding and appreciating human differences,” reads the study abroad website. A survey from the Institute for International Education of Students found that 96% of students who study abroad reported increased confidence, with 95% claiming it had a lasting impact on their worldview. Three-quarters of respondents say they acquired skill sets that influenced their future career paths.

More than just ziplining through rainforest and trekking around the Taj Mahal, these excursions offer students a productive schedule with many activities to submerge in. Costa Rica will be offered as an anthropology course titled Primate

Ecology and Ecosystems (ANTH 2083) available for registration for the spring 2018 semester. Students will be able to focus on primate behavior, ecology, and conservation while learning of Costa Rica's rich biodiversity, history, and ecosystems. India is set to be in conjunction with Westminster College and will be supplementing various service projects, visiting locales such as Delhi, Pune, and Mumbai.

Costa Rica's tentative schedule looks forward May 5 through May 23, 2018 (TBD), while India is set for later in the summer. “The India program is in the works and the planning is still occurring, look for more details soon,” remarks Lucy Smith, the service-learning/study abroad coordinator who is confident in the confirmation and dates for India in the near future.

Reservation availability is determined on a first-come-first-serve basis and is limited. There are also some crucial upcoming deadlines to beware if you want to reserve a spot in next year's programs. For Costa Rica, the first deadline requires a $300 deposit, a copy of your passport, and a study abroad application which are due by December 14, 2017. (Forms can be found online at slcc.edu/studyabroad/forms)

Cheap and easy fall activities around Salt Lake

Mary Bernal and Stephanie Garcia

Contributing Writers

The summer highs are finally over. Fall has already come to Utah, and is the perfect time to go out and celebrate. There are enough pumpkin patches, festivals, and frights for everyone to enjoy. Whether its raising a beer stein on the Wasatch range, getting lost in a maze of corn, or getting your camping fix before the snow hits, there are limitless possibilities for fun.

Utah's beautiful mountains offer many hikes that are close to the valley or just a short drive away. It's easy to find hikes ranging in difficulty from easy to strenuous. Hikes offer beautiful scenery, including waterfalls and lakes. As a bonus, most hikes in Utah are free to experience.

Camping is also quite popular in Utah, with a variety of areas to choose from. Utah has over 7,000 campsites in the state. Between Big Cottonwood and Little Cottonwood Canyons, there are five campgrounds. The Cottonwood Canyons are less than a 20-minute drive from downtown Salt Lake City, which makes for a quick and easy getaway.

For those who are willing to drive a little further than the Cottonwoods, Moab, Bryce Canyon, Canyonlands, Capitol Reef, and Zion are all in Utah and offer an even more diverse landscape than the places closer to Salt Lake City.

Not all Fall activities in Utah involve the outdoors. There are always many other activities in the city that are fun and inexpensive.

The Cultural Celebration Center in West Valley will celebrate Day of Dead (Dia de Muertos), on October 28th, with traditional Mexican dance, music, food, and crafts. While there, you can also walk through an exhibit of traditional altars and related art.

A traditional German celebration with food, beer, and activities, Oktoberfest is held at Snowbird Ski Resort through October 15th, every Saturday and Sunday. Though a celebration fueled by alcohol, Snowbird encourages a family friendly atmosphere where all are welcome.

If you're after something outside of the city, the Witchstock Festival in Ogden is a costume party with carnival games and a zombie crawl. For the uninitiated, or unbitten, a crawl is a public gathering of brain and party hungry zombies in an urban setting. The Witchstock Festival will also include a Monster Bash dance party hosted by Dracula himself.

Wheeler Farm's Pumpkin days, a family and childhood favorite, runs through October and is $10 for those over the age of two. The price of admission comes with its own pumpkin and unlimited rides on the Wagon Ride, Cow Train, or through the hay maze.

Whatever you choose, these activities can help you get in the fall mood. All are great examples of fun things to do with friends and family. Fall break starts next week, and campuses will be closed. Make sure to enjoy it, and be back Monday the 23rd ready for the rest of the semester!

Though not included in this list, relative newcomer Fear Factory gives other attractions a run for their money, and now features a zipline. Additionally, tickets are available from SLCCSA for just $10.

Stuck between a rock and a hard place, a Castle of Chaos visitor stumbles to avoid two sets of teeth.

The Strangling Brothers Haunted Circus is the perfect place for someone who saw "It" but hated how it wasn't actually happening to them.

TOP HAUNTED HOUSES

Mika Clopten
Contributing Writer

Haunted houses are a Halloween tradition for many here in Utah, and now that it's October we are all looking for a good scare. Here are a few haunted houses that will definitely give you a good fright.

NIGHTMARE ON 13TH

Nightmare on 13th is known for always changing things up each year, and this year is no different. This year's theme is the dark side of Halloween.

You get a look at the new and improved haunted courtyard and it only gets spookier from there. Once inside, you are met with the story of the Sleepy Hollow. To end your night of fright, you will be adventuring through the sewers with non-other than "IT".

Nightmare on 13th is located at 1300 S 320 W in Salt Lake City. Individual tickets start at $25 each, and for a group of 20+ tickets are $15 per person.

STRANGLING BROTHERS HAUNTED CIRCUS

The Strangling Brothers Haunted Circus was voted the seventh Scariest Haunted House in the World in 2013. Many people have said that it is like a real-life horror movie.

During this horrifying experience, you come face to face with the most freaky and unruly characters. This year the Haunted Circus is welcoming one of the creepiest clowns, Pennywise. The circus is 50,000 square feet of fright!

Strangling Brothers Haunted Circus is located at 632 E 1500 S in American Fork, Utah. Individual tickets are $25 per person, and for a VIP fast pass tickets are $35 per person.

HAUNTED HOLLOW

If you are more of an outside person, the Haunted Hallow may be for you.

The Haunted Hallow sits on 13 acres of forest and is filled with trails that leads to hundreds of swamps, mine shafts, dungeons, caves and much more. Everywhere is filled with demons and ghouls waiting to scare the life out of you.

The Haunted Hallow asks guest not to run because the monsters, demons, and ghouls chase you down many dark trails and they want you to remain as safe as possible.

Even on rainy days you can still go get your spooky fix at the Haunted Hallow.

Haunted Hallow is located at 1550 S 1900 W in West Haven, UT 84401. All tickets are $21.

10TH WEST SCARE HOUSE

If you are looking for a less scary and more family friendly haunted house, 10th West Scare House is just the place you're looking for.

This haunted attraction offers a "tasteful scaring" without all the gore. It's a safer alternative to the horrifying haunted houses we are used to.

10th West Scare House is both an indoor and outdoor attraction designed to startle you.

10th West Scare House is located at located at 900 N 1000 W in Logan, Utah. Ticket prices start at $7 per person for either inside or outside. For both, tickets are $13 per person.

CASTLE OF CHAOS

The Castle of Chaos is Utah's only partially underground haunted house. This year the Romanians have taken over the castle. It's time to party like it's 1929 on the vampire dance floor and get ready to be dealt up a scare at the casino and lounge.

The Castle of Chaos offers different levels of fear for all haunted house lovers alike. These levels of fear range from level one, for the easily scared, to level four, for the extreme hands-on experience.

In order to access level four, you must sign a waiver.

Castle of Chaos is located at 7980 S State St. in Midvale, Utah. Individual tickets start at $23, VIP tickets are $33, and to skip the line is $40.

Another weighs in on National Anthem discord

Tanner Barr

Opinion Writer

In recent sporting events, we've seen and heard about player protests, and now some coaches kneeling during the national anthem. This is causing major distractions to the game. Here's an idea: let's stop playing the national anthem before sporting events.

It is well understood that standing, saluting or putting our hands over our hearts during the national anthem at a sporting event is what we're used to, but we didn't even start playing the anthem until the World War II era. Part of this is due to the lack of recording and amplification in music, but let's think about what really is at stake by not playing the national anthem.

Would we be dishonoring the country? No.

Would it be an insult to our military, or our flag? No.

"It may be a good idea to stop playing the national anthem in general, but then again, if the [player] doesn't want to stand during it, I think they should just stay inside the locker room until it's over," says Chandler Collins, a student at SLCC. He makes a good point. Some may say the national anthem is played before a sporting event as tribute to those who lost their lives in battle. Professional sports are a type of mock-battle where combats are fought, but there aren't ever any lives lost. In the face of the uproar about whether to stand, sit or kneel, it may be better to do away with it all together. There may not be a reason to honor the NFL, the NBA, NHL or MLB with the playing of the national anthem. After all, these athletes— who some say are overpaid — aren't worthy of the national anthem as they are hardly considered role models for our youth. They should maybe insist that the anthem is discontinued with the possible exception of the Olympic games, which has a national identity.

"Even though these sporting events are a type of battle, I don't think you can compare a real war zone to a football game," says Tanner Day, a SLCC Student. "I think the playing of the national anthem before games is a good thing, but maybe they should take a poll from the athletes to get their opinion."

According to Fox Sports, they will no longer air coverage of the national anthem before its NFL games. The network added, "However, our cameras are always rolling and we will document the response of players and coaches on the field."

This also brings up the point when President Donald Trump called out some of the players who decide to kneel during the anthem in a tweet calling them "sons of bitches." President Trump also said they should be fired from the league.

If we just stopped playing the national anthem, it would be a logical assumption that this would put an end to all the troubles. We would still have players who silently and peacefully protest, but this will stop all the unnecessary shenanigans, and stick to what the people are paying to see the game.

In contrast, Tylt, a poll-taking website last June asked: Should we stop playing the national anthem before sporting events? A resounding 83.3 percent said the anthem is "a must." Less than 17 percent voted "games not anthems". Another poll on maristpoll.marist.edu showed even stronger support. Only eight percent of American's polled said the anthem should not be played at sporting events. History shows that American sports fans like to be patriotically juiced before they watch their favorite teams and athletes head for game time.

This may continue to cause more controversy if the national anthem is removed before games. Let's leave it up to the players and coaches to see if this comes to an end, or if the anthem is continued to play and stirs up the pot even more.
