Fashion is blooming this spring at SLCC

Tamra Rachol

Staff Writer

Spring is a busy time for the Fashion Department at Salt Lake Community College. With several upcoming events, Amy Royer, an adjunct professor, spent Saturday afternoon supporting Utah's seventh annual Clean Air Solutions Fair.

Reusable cloth napkins and tote bags, assembled from upcycled jeans and sewn together by herself and her students, were offered to the public free of charge.

"I love the clever reuse aspect, turning trash into treasure," says SLCC alum Catharine Scott, who helped Royer with the event.

The sustainable fashion course, which was spearheaded by Royer just over three years ago, is now offered at SLCC.

"Fashion is the second largest polluting industry in the world," Royer explains. "We need to do our part to keep it out of the landfill."

The program has been a hit with students and does not lack creativity or excitement. Each semester, students are given some interesting challenges, like forging their own creations from leftover scraps or assembling fashion statements from Savers with only $5 in hand. Everything else has to come from the donation pile to create head-to-toe sustainable, upcycled fashion.

The program also presents "Cosplay for a Cause," which will take place on March 14 and honor SLCC alum, Cinamon Hadley, who died in January 2018 from cancer. Hadley was the inspiration for the character "Death" in the 1989 "Sandman" comic series by Neil Gaiman.

"Cosplay for a Cause" is a student and faculty run fundraiser to help support the new up-and-coming fashion designers. All proceeds go to the Cinamon Hadley Scholarship Fund.

The free event, held at the Gateway downtown, brought in a crowd of locals wanting to see new things the community is doing to help the environment.

» The Flying Words Project brings ASL literature into the spotlight

On March 7, the Flying Words Project was preformed at Salt Lake Community College's South City campus. The project is a collaboration between deaf American Sign Language poet Peter Cook with spoken word by Kenny Lerner. Together they show and tell poetry in a way that is inclusive to the deaf, blind and hearing.

There was a large turnout of people to see the show, which was filled with laughter and audience involvement.

The event was supported by the Community Writing Center in partnership with the Utah Division of Arts and Museums with funding by State of Utah and the National Endowment for the Arts.

Bruins find success under first-year coaches

Every team in college sports sets preseason goals. They often start small and get progressively more ambitious, the pinnacle being a national championship. It doesn't matter the level of competition, ranging from junior college to Division 1 athletics, athletes often want to be the last ones standing.

The Bruins men's and women's basketball teams have already checked off two of those preseason goals: win the regular season conference title and the postseason conference championship.

In addition, the men's team checked off the western district championship Saturday night in a 101-73 dismantling of Eastern Arizona.

The Bruins are led by five All-Region 18 players. Justice Hill was named the Region 18 Player of the Year. Hill was joined by fellow first teamer, Asa McCord along with Spencer Johnson, Christian Popoola and Ed Chang, garnering Region 18 second team and Region 18 honorable mention accolades. First-year head coach, Kyle Taylor, was named the Region 18 Coach of the Year.

"This is really a team award," he says. "I'm blessed to work somewhere like SLCC with great people and resources."

Riding a 15-game win streak, a perfect 14-0 conference record, the Bruins men's basketball team gears up for the NJCAA National Tournament in Hutchison, Kansas.

Bruins head coach glows when talking about his first team at SLCC.

"We're really good defensively," Taylor says. "We were fortunate with recruiting and got some really talented players that want to work."

The women's basketball team fought through some early season struggles before amassing a 15-game mid-season winning streak. They clinched the SWAC regular season crown on the final weekend, before rolling through the Region 18 tournament with wins of 24 points and 19 points, resulting in the programs seventh consecutive NJCAA national tournament trip.

With their own Region 18 Co-Player of the Year in Awa Sidibe, first teamer Ashley Scoggins, second team honoree Leichan Williams, along with Hazel Fui and Fatoumata Jallow being recognized on the honorable mention list, the Bruins women's team took home plenty of regular season hardware themselves.

First-year head coach, Marcelina Grayer, appreciates the growth she's seen out of her team this season.

"We played a tough early season schedule in hopes it would prepare us for moments like this," she says, referring to the 19-point drubbing of rival USU

Eastern in the Region 18 title game. "We're excited to be representing the SWAC in the NJCAA tournament."

The Bruin women open as an 18-seed against Butler College on March 17 at 5 p.m. The Bruin men will wait until March 18 at 11 a.m. before they hit the hardwood again. They enter tournament play as a 4-seed, facing the winner out of Western Wyoming CC vs. Angelina.

Students receive Dean's and President's list accolades

Students and families gathered at the Taylorsville Redwood Campus for the annual Academic Excellence Celebration March 3 to honor those on the President's List or Dean's List.

Over 1,200 students landed a spot on these lists each year. President's List students must have completed 15 or more credit hours during a semester and achieve a grade point average of 3.8 or higher. The Dean's List requires the same credit minimum with a GPA between 3.5 and 3.79.

Soft guitar music played as students and families gathered before the event began. Students mingled with college deans and professors, introducing them to families and friends.

The program began with the Dean of Students and Assistant Vice President Ken Stonebrook, who made a point to recognize and congratulate those who support students and their academic success.

Attendees received special remarks from President Deneece Huftalin.

“You’re going to be prepared,” Huftalin said. “Your resume is going to show it. Your transcript is going to show it. The way you interview is going to show it. And that is all because of the little steps you’re taking throughout your career here to do well.”

Andrew Munguia, a nursing major and an anatomy lab assistant at SLCC, shared his experience and struggles, recognizing and commending students for their hard work.

“We often worry about the future,” Munguia said. “Will I get an A? Will I get into my program? Will I become what I want to be? All different ways of asking, what if I fail? My answer to that is, what if you succeed and it all works out? Let other people tell you no.”

The atmosphere in the room was positive and uplifting with proud parents and grandparents taking many photos.

The short program ended with the pinning ceremony, when families place a pin on the students' lapels to commemorate their success.
